

10-14-84-p. 1

over a year ago today I moved into 81 Hendrick Lane and became the caretaker of the Rebecca Colville estate; on 06-16-1984 I moved out of 81 H.L.; on 06-19-1984, George Walli, Jr. installed electricity here at Elddale; on 06-20-1984, I slept here for the first time. When I awoke that first morning here at Elddale, I realized, once again, with complete certainty that ninety-five percent of the activities of the human race have no relevance whatsoever for me. I have been here at Elddale for almost four months and have not for one second ever had any second thoughts/doubts about the rightness of my decision to move here. And now I am thinking about Gertrude Stein and about her portrait in words of Henri Matisse and yet this move to Elddale was correct & yet it was inevitable.

10 A.M. - Terry Bridge and a man driving a tractor that is pulling some kind of device have just appeared in the back meadow (which belongs to Bridge). What are they doing? Will they mow the meadow? Wouldn't that be wonderful.

1010 AM - Departure from Elddale for Church in Carbondale. I make a water re-filling stop at the Golf Course & then proceed into town, where I arrived at Church just as the service was beginning - the "We Have Come Into This House" call to worship. The hymn "God of Abraham Praise" is very beautiful - based on a Hebrew melody. Pullin talked about Moses & Exodus today and I read silently to myself the first seven chapters of Exodus. Very beautiful. Perhaps I will read all of Exodus. That book of the Bible, as well as Leviticus, are very interesting to me at present.

Perfectly beautiful afternoon, but the leaves had already passed their prime (probably about the 10th). Waited for about an hour for the Chair lift but it was worth it. I rode alone. Elaine Rinaldi told me on 10/16/84 that she saw me there - buying some old photographs.
